GOOD OLD STAND-BY

Everybody exactly what is claimed for the reasons for the great popularity of this Liniment is found in its universal usefulness. Everybody needs such a medicine.

The Lumberman needs it in case of accident.

Every household needs it for general family use.

The Farmer needs it for his teams and his men.

The Mechanic needs it always on his work bench.

The Miner needs it in case of emergency.

The Pioneer needs it—can't get along without it.

The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard

The Steamboat man or the Boatman needs it in liberal supply afloat and ashore.

The Horse-fancier needs it—it is his best friend and safest reliance.

The Stock-grower needs it—it will save him thousands of dollars and a world of trouble.

The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers.

The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to life, limb and comfort which surround the pioneer.

The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will happen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once.

Keep a Bottle in the House. 'Tis the best of economy.

Keep a Bottle in the Factory. Its immediate use in case of accident saves pain and loss of wages.

Keep a Bottle Always in the Stable for use when wanted.

FETTERS AND LURES.

(CONCL[illegible])

One such glimpse of heaven is enough to transfigure a lifetime. This they had. But when it was over Amy found the briars thick in her path. She had made a step that night which set her feet upon them. She promised Victor to appeal to Ralph, to tell him that she did not love him; and he had so worked upon her, so strengthened and inspirited her that she half hoped Ralph would not care so deeply, and would release her. After all, he was too good for her, and would do better with a stronger and cleverer woman. She did not yet know that the very pliability of her nature was her chief charm for him. He could not have loved a woman whose individuality resisted him. Careless that he crushed the flower, he was careful only to hold it firmly enclosed in his grasp.

It was agreed between them that they should not meet again till after Ralph's arrival. Both were conscious that since the barriers had been broken between them they could no longer maintain the artificial relations possible till then.

On the evening of Ralph's arrival Amy went to the station on foot to meet him. She was restless and glad to walk. The train came in, but did not bring him, and she turned away half relieved and yet disappointed. As she took the wood path leading homeward, a step behind made her turn, and in a second Victor joined her. He made no attempt to account for his presence, and indeed she had forgotten that he should not be there. It was so sweet to see him, she could think of nothing else. They had a mile to walk, and before home was reached twilight had set in. Her hand was on his arm and his eyes melting into hers. When they reached the cottage he paused on the steps, and said, with his heart in his voice and his soul in his eyes:

"Let me come in for one moment."

The tone asked for more than the words, and Amy felt her resolution fade, when as she hesitated a voice from the door said:

"I have come, Amy. I hoped to find you here."

It was Ralph. They started, and Victor, hastily shaking hands with Holcombe, turned away, while Amy ran into the house, whither Ralph followed her. He said nothing of Victor, and was quite himself, perhaps a trifle colder than usual, but Amy felt that it had better be said that night.

And it was said. She told him all—that is, all that she knew, for she did but half understand the riddle she herself had made. She told him the facts, and as much of the truth as she knew. It was for him to decipher the rest. But her eloquence failed her. Under Ralph's glance the thoughts that had seemed to lit them alike grew exaggerated and fanciful. His sway was upon her, and she beat against his calmness as if it were a rock. He listened quietly, grimly; and once when she said some word of her love having overcome her strength, he clenched his hands and muttered "Great God, it is hard to bear!" but only once.

When she had finished with piteous appeal to him not to think hardly of her, he said:

"Amy, I do not quite understand why you have told me this. Is it because you have been betrayed into a disloyalty and come to renew your allegiance, or is it because you wish to leave me?"

His voice sounded deep and hoarse as he said the few last words.

She stood uncertain, and then said:

"Oh, let me go. I want you to let me go. I am not worthy of you—not the woman whom you should marry. Let me go, Ralph!"

He rose and said, "Give me to-night to think. I cannot answer you so suddenly. My life turns on it, and yours also. To-morrow morning you shall have my answer." Then he left her.

That night made its mark on those three souls, however differently it was passed; for love and passionate grief, sorrow and disappointment brand themselves indelibly on all human things upon whom they fall.

The next morning early Ralph sought the cottage. "Amy," he said, "I have thought for you and for myself, and may God do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me."

She shuddered at his words as if she were hearing the sentence of death pronounced upon her. He took no note of it, but went on in the same inflexible way:

"It is better for you, for us both, that you should be my wife. Listen to me. Victor Heyward cannot, will not, I should say, marry you. You are fragile and young—a woman who most emphatically needs a strong arm to fight for her and protect her. Here you cannot stay if our engagement is broken and I go away. You will go forth into the world to fight an unequal battle and succumb. This is your only alternative. I love you, and I think understand you. Life with me will develop your stronger self. The enervating atmosphere of luxury in which these people live, the climate itself, are injurious to you—a plant of northern growth. With me you will be braced and made strong, and I can make you love me. This is all mist, this fancy of yours, and the sun will melt it away. I have decided. I will not release you. You can break with me, forfeit your word, and the burden of a broken promise will rest on you always. I trusted you, and now you have failed me, but I still trust myself. I am sure, and I am steadfast. I will marry you if you will keep your word."

He looked bold and strong, almost noble as he spoke these words, and stood upright and inflexible before her.

She looked at him, and her whole soul gave way. She did not love him, but she was unable to resist him; his strong will had met her feeble one and trampled it under foot. She felt this, and he felt it, and at that instant when their souls seemed to be illuminated by a sudden light, the light in his eyes that gleamed upon her, was that of power, not of love: and hers gave back only a dull reflection of submission. Her heart had recoiled from meeting her conqueror.

"Well, Amy," he said, "will you keep your word?"

"I will," she said.

"Then, one thing more: you will write to Mr. Heyward and tell him the truth as you told me?"

"Yes," she said, "I will. I must do that."

"Do it now, then. I will see that he gets it, and then it is all over. Do not rear a quarrel between us; I would not consent to quarrel with him."

"Let me write," she said and he led her to a table where there were pens, ink, and paper.

She drew a sheet toward her, wrote a few words, and then said, as if she was stunned and weary: "Write for me, or tell me what to say."

He wrote the note, which she copied as if mechanically till the last words when she shivered and added a few words, which he let pass. The note ran thus: "I write to tell you that I have determined to marry Mr. Holcombe. This being so, I need scarcely say that it better that we should not see one another again. Mr. Holcombe forgives the wrong I have done him, and I am ready and willing to keep my promise to him. You could never have married me, and it better for you as well as for me that this should be the end of our summer's dream. Believe that I shall always wish you well;" and here she added, "and believe above all that I loved you." She signed it, and it was done. Ralph drew her to him, held her tight against his heart for a moment—said, "Amy, you shall be happy," then left her.

That night Victor Heyward left his home suddenly, saying he would return in a few days; but they grew to be weeks, and he did not come. Ralph urged on his wedding; and when three weeks had gone by they were made man and wife. It was a very pretty wedding—the bride a little paler, the groom perhaps a trifle sterner than bridegroom are wont to be; but still all went well and smoothly. The summer's glory was over, the early autumn had come, and there was but little of the southern wealth of color and perfume about the day that saw them married. Ralph liked it better so, and Amy thought it did not matter. They went away to their new home, and found it awaiting them, simple and modest, but very fresh and full of comfort, with old Mrs. Holcombe at the door, all sober, gray and brown.

Three months after Amy was sitting alone at twilight, when the door of her little parlor opened and a man entered abruptly; it was Victor Heyward. She put her hand up, as an involuntary impulse bade her, to keep him from her. He stood still and looked at her eagerly and long. His face was haggard and worn, and she saw that he was trembling with agitation.

"Amy," he said, "I thought I could not live any longer without seeing you. It seemed as if it would give me life again, and I have come. I have travelled since the thought came to me day and night. I do not know why. Are you angry with me, Amy?"

He spoke so humbly and sadly, that she could not speak harshly to him.

"Victor, you should have spared yourself—have spared us both this trial. We can never be anything to one another. Why did you come here? I am married—happily married. Do not come to raise ghosts about me."

He raised his head and said gloomily, "No, I should not have come here. You are happy, you say? You forget easily, more easily than I can do. Oh, Amy, my love, why did you ever come here. Why did you not marry me, me who was your real lover?"

She flushed with resentment. "Mr. Heyward," she said, "spare me needless insult. That you did not ask me to marry you was perhaps the fault of circumstances rather than your own."

"What!" he cried; "Amy, Amy, what are you saying? I insult you? I not ask you to marry me? God in heaven! What did the letter Holcombe gave you from me say? Did it not lay my fortune and my hand at your feet? And you did not condescend to refuse them, save by your silence."

She looked into his eyes, saw that he spoke truth, then covered her face with her hands. When she at last was able to speak, it was with composure, but her face was deadly pale, and she shook from head to foot, calm as her words were.

"You must go," she said. "I never had any letter from you. Hush! do not speak to me of it—no, nor of him. My life is made; I must live it out. I may not speak to you or look on your face again. Do not take my hand, Victor. Go away. Remember the past is past, and cannot be undone."

She motioned him to go, and he dared not stay. At the door he turned.

"Let me stay, Amy. Amy, you owe him nothing. He has wronged us both. Come with me, Amy, and be happy."

"Happy!" she said, and a wan smile crept over her lips. "No, I should not be happy. You love me, Victor, and you will go away. Victor! I love you, and you will surely go away!"

He went without a word and left her standing there. She sat down again to her work in a few moments, and when Ralph came in from his work all seemed as usual. His wife was quiet, but then she was always quiet now, and no one would have guessed that her heart was broken. Once that evening she looked at him, as he sat studying, long and hard, and murmured, almost unconsciously, "Poor Ralph! he did it for the best."

He asked her what she said, but she answered, "Only a childish trick of talking to myself," and he was satisfied.

In a few months more her baby was born, but it died within a few hours of its birth, and after that she never held up her head, but faded with the flowers.

The morning that she died she called her husband, and as he leaned over her she said:

"Ralph, I want to tell you before I die that I forgive you for keeping back the letter Victor sent me by you. At first I thought it cruel, but now I can see you were tempted sorely, and you thought it best for both. Was it not so? No, don't speak, dear, and don't be sorry for it. I could not have lived—and now—I am tired. Good-by."

He sank on his knees, for once thoroughly unmanned, his self-command all gone. He sobbed out like a child incoherent prayers for forgiveness.

Miss S.: "Well, 'Adolphus' is a noun, because it is the name of a thing; 'married' is a conjunction, because it joins Adolphus and Caroline, and 'Caroline' is a verb, 'cause it governs the noun."

EIGHTEENTH DISTRICT FAIR.

The people of this State, through the Legislature, have done much in bringing about the "boom" that is now prevailing in the agricultural portions of the State by the formation of the counties into agricultural districts, and fostering the same through annual appropriations from the State Treasury. The annual fairs of these districts, in addition to the State Fair, are held when our State is filled with Eastern visitors, thousands of whom, astonished at the exhibits made, resolve to make California their permanent home, and this influx of the better class of Eastern people, many of whom are very wealthy, and care little about the price of land, if the location and improvements strike their fancy; and it is this indifference, or liberality, we may call it, that has enhanced real estate values in more favored localities on the other side of the mountains.

The Legislature last Winter constituted Alpine, Inyo and Mono counties the 18th Agricultural District, and this Fall the first fair of this District will be held at Independence, Inyo county, commencing September 27th, to continne five days. Inyo is enjoying a small boom, which promises to assume greater proportions when it is a settled fact that the Carson & Colorada Railroad will be extended through that county to a connection with Los Angeles. The first annual fair of this District will chiefly be confined to the exhibits of Inyo county, unless the people of Benton and the southern part of Mono county have some exhibits to make. By next year we trust our immediate neighbors in the northern portion of the county will be prepared to take an interest in the fair, and exhibit some fine cattle and fast horses. Our stock raisers should remember that after the first cost of the parental stock, it costs no more to raise a $500 horse than a $50 one, and there is always a demand for good horses. And the same can be said of cattle. The Big Meadows of Bridgeport are well adapted to this business, and while we have much good stock in these Meadows we have not what we might call fancy stock. Our horse raisers should turn their attention, also, to the raising of draught animals, for which class of horses San Francisco offers at all times a remunerative market. The District Fairs can, and will be utilized for the public sale of stock on exhibition, and such fairs are always attended by stock dealers. We hope the coming District Fair will be a success in every particular, and that the residents of southern Mono will do all within their power to make it so.

A TRIFLE MIXED.—In our last issue we got things a little mixed in regard to the Inyo Fairs, we having designated the coming Fair of the Eastern Slope Agricultural Association at Bishop Creek as the Eighteenth District Fair. We regret to notice a seeming "onpleasantness" among our Inyo neighbors over Fair matters. We beg to suggest that the initial Fair of our new Agricultural District should be inaugurated with the kindliest feelings and without local bickerings among our Inyo friends, in whose midst the exposition is to be held. There should be a unanimity, even to the postponement of the Fair of the Eastern Slope Association to another year, that the energies of the whole people of Inyo may be directed to making their District Fair a greater success than it can be if there are antagonisms to contend with. "Let us have peace," brethren of Inyo!

John R. Edwards came up from Cameron on Thursday.

PIONEER BANQUET.

Admission Day was appropriately celebrated yesterday, in Bridgeport, by the Pioneer Association. Flags were displayed, salutes fired, and bells rung at sunrise, noon and sunset; and a banquet and dance in the evening at Bryant's Hall.

At 9 o'clock, at the cornet call of J. A. Brown, 105 guests were seated, and the dishes uncovered—Miss Mamie Parker, pianist, and H. C. Hampton, violinist, handsomely rendering a grand march.

A. F. Bryant, President, presided, and R. M. Folger, Secretary, acted as Master of Ceremonies.

The President welcomed the audience with a brief and appropriate address.

At 10 o'clock the literary and musical exercises commenced by a piano solo, by Mamie Parker, followed as follows:

Toast—Native Sons of the Golden West, response by John Murphey.

Song—Cottage by the River; Bridgeport Glee Club.

Toast—The Ladies; response by O. H. Kister.

Song—The Sexton, by Dr. Walker.

Reading—The Wedding Fee, by Mrs. J. A. Brown.

Toast—Bodie Guests; response by N. S. Warren.

Song—Stephen and so Forth, by A. P. Allen.

Toast—California; response by Richard S. Miner.

Song—Bury Me near the Old Home, by Mrs. J. A. Brown.

Toast.—Stock Raising; response by Hon. T. B. Rickey.

Piano solo—Fra Diavolo, Miss Parker.

Toast—The Bar; response by District Attorney Virden.

Song—Leaf by Leaf, by Mrs. A. P. Allen.

Toast—Mining Interests; response by Hon. Horace Marden.

Air from Louis XIII, by Miss Parker and H. C. Hampton.

Toast—Sheep Raising; response by W. Parker.

Song—Help one Another, by D. N. Walters—encore, The Pretty Widow he met on the Train.

Toast—Pioneers of '49; response by Judge Murphey.

Cornet solo, by J. A. Brown.

Song—Good Bye John, by A. P. Allen.

Song—There is a Light in the Window, by W. O. Parker.

Song—Low Back Car, by A. F. Bryant.

Song—Little Sam, by Master Arthur Walters.

R. M. Folger closed the exercises with a brief address at 12:30. Three cheers were given for the "Old Pioneers;" the floor was cleared and dancing commenced, and continued until four this morning. The affair was a happy and enjoyable event, the tables being well-furnished with all that is requisite for the occasion, and handsomely decorated.

AMENDE HONORABLE.—Last week, in our report of the capture of Joy and Loughlin on the Sonora road, with stolen horses in their possession, we gave all the credit of their capture to Dan. Simpson, when Len. Hamilton should have had the credit, as he was the star actor in the important capture. As the prisoners are to have an early trial, we shall make no further comments.

ACCIDENT.—On Thursday, Miss Mary Hector, daughter of Supervisor Hector, was thrown from a wagon on the Hawthorne road, while accompanying the remains of Mrs. J. D. Minor from Bodie to that place, and injured, but to what extent we have not learned. Miss Hector was brought back to Bodie, while the rest went on to Hawthorne.

WILL OPEN.—Last evening the Trustees decided to open the Bridgeport school on next Monday week—the 19th.

The Antelope school will open on Monday next, Miss Marsh, teacher.

The Little Antelope School will be taught by Miss Lloyd, of Carson.

CON. PACIFIC.—This Company has levied a Fifteen cent assessment, delinquent October 11th; sale November 8th. See under "New To-day."

CAPTURED AT LAST!

The good people of Mono county will be pleased to learn that John Wilson, alias "Tex", Kellet, Baldwin, Goodheart, McLennan, and perhaps a dozen other names, has at last been captured and safely lodged in the county jail of Fresno county at Fresno, from which he will not escape as easily as he did from our county jail on the evening of December 1st, 1884. The people of Mono county have special reasons for rejoicing over the capture of this outlaw and notorious desperado, cattle and horse thief, and supposed murderer. In the Summer of '84 Wilson was in the mountains of this county, and in the latter part of September he stopped the Bodie & Lundy stage soon after leaving Lundy in the morning, and abducted a Chinawoman, whom he had ascertained had considerable money on her person. He took her into the mountains, robbed her of $260, and detained her eight days. A posse started out to hunt him, and after a light snow-fall he was tracked and captured on the 3d of October by Deputy Sheriff Callahan. His examination at Lundy will long be remembered for its side issues and affrays, resulting in the shooting of Deputy Sheriffs Callahan and Steves, and the subsequent death of Callahan. Wilson was committed to the County Jail to await his trial, and on the 19th of October an information was filed against him. On the 1st of December, at about 6 o'clock in the evening he escaped through the transom over the door Sheriff McKinney having singularly failed to lock him in his cell at the usual hour of about four o'clock. It was dark, and most of our people being at supper he slid out of town and escaped into the mountains. He had cut through the transom iron bar with a knife-blade saw, doing his work at odd times when Miss McKinney was playing on the piano in the Sheriff's residence adjoining the jail. Wilson again made this section a visit this season, and it may be that he got away with some of our Mono horses

Wilson, it is said, killed a man at Montezuma, Nev., some twelve years ago, and escaped; killed Jim Donovan at Jefferson Canyon, Nevada, and escaped punishment. He is credited with keeping a rendezvous for robbers near Candelaria, Nev., and with innumerable robberies in Nevada and California.

The credit of capturing this fellow is due to Constable Hensley, of Madera, Fresno county, who started in pursuit of him on August 27th, Wilson having spent the previous night at Miller & Lux's camp, four miles from town. Hensley overtook him at the Hildreth ranch, but not being certain he had his man he accompanied him some ways when Wilson, pretending he was going to the Hildreth mine, bade him goodbye. Hensley rode fast to Bates Station, where he got a description of Tex, and was soon on his trail, but had difficulty in getting assistance. With the aid of matches and candles he and a companion followed his track all night. On Sunday he closed rapidly on him, and secured the assistance of three Indians and several whites. Sunday night was spent tracking around Goat Mountain, and on Monday they saw Tex's horse in a meadow. An Indian scout was sent out in one direction, while Hensley crept along the edge of the meadow. Suddenly he heard a shot, and saw the Indian, who told him to look out, or he would get shot. He saw Tex running for a tree, against which his rifle leaned. Another shot from the Indian's gun! and Tex dropped. As Hensley approached, Tex begged him not to shoot, and said he was ready to give up. He was ordered to disarm himself, but before doing so he had Hensley's promise to protect him. He then threw his revolver toward his gun. Hensley arrested him and examined his wounds. A ball had passed through the left thigh, and one through the right knee cap, and another grazed the shin bone of the right leg. In taking his prisoner to Fresno, Hensley heard mutterings of vigilantes at Coarse Gold, so he hurried on, and it is said the vigilantes tried to overtake him, but he was too far ahead of them, and they gave up the chase. Hensley deposited his valuable charge in the Fresno jail on the 1st. It is to be hoped this scoundrel will be given his just deserts at the end of a rope.

SHAMEFUL CONDUCT.—At the Pioneer banquet last evening several boys, sons of prominent citizens who did not attend the banquet, were given seats at the table without charge. After getting their fill they showed their appreciation of the kindness shown them by being noisy, and wantonly destroying eatables, pouring wine into the sugar bowls, slipping outdoors with pieces of pie, with which they plastered the windows, and making unseemly noises. Their conduct was shameful, and hereafter it is probable that boys will not be admitted to such entertainments.

COUNTY TREASURY.—On the 5th inst. A. F. Hector, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, District Attorney Virden, and Auditor Kister counted the moneys in the Treasury and found therein what actually ought to have been there—$23,624 77.

HELD.—Justice Hanson held Joy and Laughlin to answer before the Superior Court upon the charge of horse stealing, fixing bail at $1,000 each.

FINE.—The weather this week has been very pleasant, barring one or two windy afternoons.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

WHAT HE WANTS.—Our friend, Silas B. Smith, of Bodie, don't "want the earth," but he does want, and merits, a share of public patronage, as he has a fine stock of goods in store for the Spring and Summer trade—for "Spot Cash." And it is surprising, the amount of goods a few American Dollars will get away with from Silas B.'s store. See his new advertisement on the second page.

PLATED GOODS.—The latest patterns of PLATED WARE, SPOONS, KNIVES and FORKS, etc. are at Charles H. Kelly's Store, Bodie, and offered at prices suitable for hard times.

CARPETS.—Charles H. Kelly, of Bodie, has received a new stock of TAPESTRY-BRUSSELS, THREE-PLY, and INGRAIN CARPETS, which can be bought at hard times prices.

Manufacturer of Acorn Dress Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Fronts, Ladies' Collars and Lace Neckwear, ALBANY, N. Y.

The latest shirt issued under the "Acorn" Brand is "THE WONDER," and it is also the best shirt ever made for the Trade.

The following are some of its principal points of excellence, a printed list of which is attached to each shirt:

1st—It has the finest and heaviest muslin ever put in a shirt, (Utica Nonpariel improved).

2—It has a 3-ply linen bosom.

3—It is of extra length.

4—It is reinforced, both back and front, extending and meeting under the arm where most needed.

5—It has the Tomlinson patent endless facing.

6—It is custom make and finish.

7—It cannot break or tear anywhere.

Like the Deacon's "one-hoss shay," it has no weak spot, and will never "give" anywhere, but, at the end of scores of years, it will dissolve into space—not a thread broken or a seam started.

Fathers will bequeath these shirts, purchased in early manhood, egacy to their children.

We expect a large demand for them to place in the corner stones of publi structures as evidence of the greatest triumph of modern civilization.

We are taking steps to put this crowning achievement of art into the "Acorn agencies in London, Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and Constantinople, when it can not fail of instant and permanent success.

FARMING NOTES.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES IN STABLES.

When we consider for a moment the number of diseases of a contagious nature to which horses are subject, and the careless manner in which they are exposed to the same, it is astonishing that we do not have epidemics of this kind oftener with our horses. To fully appreciate the risk that is incurred, we need only visit the city or country towns on court days or Saturdays, and see the number of horses of all kinds and conditions that stand tied and almost touching each other to every available space about town, to say nothing of the numbers that are packed together in the public stables. The latter, as a rule, are much safer from coming in contact with disease then those outside, for no sensible stable-man would admit an animal inside of his stable that is affected with any kind of contagious disease if he knew it; but it often happens that neither the owner of the horse nor the stable-man is aware of the disease until it is too late to remedy the evil. Contagious diseases of a most virulent character may be perpetuated for an indefinite length of time by feeding horses in stalls where the disease has existed. Of this kind we may mention glanders and Spanish itch especially. Either of those most fatal disorders may be conveyed to other horses by feeding in a stall where horses suffering with them have been kept. To destroy the virus, take a pint of sulphuric acid and put it in a bucket of water, and with an old mop wash all parts of the stall, especially the trough and manger, as well as the sides of the stall. Then put a few pounds of stick sulphur in an old iron pot, and, stopping the stable as well as possible, burn it, so as to fumigate the stable thoroughly, taking due precautions against fire. It is a good plan to set the pot in a tub of water; then whitewash with lime and carbolic acid. This will protect them thoroughly.

CURING HAY.

The old method of cutting and caring for newly-cut hay by hand required a longer time to carefully cure the product than is now requisite. By the use of the horse scythe, spreader and rake, grass can be cured quite as perfectly in one day as it formerly could in two days. If the machine is not started in the morning till the dew has dried off, and the tedder is kept at work well up behind the mower, there is no difficulty in curing hay enough to haul in the same day it is cut, if the grass is mature and the weather favorable. Cut grass that is fully exposed to the sun and air for two hours will have little moisture left in it. It is not necessary to wait till the whole field is as crisp and dry as bones before beginning to haul to the barn. It should be the aim to have just as much of the curing done in the cock, on the wagon and in the mow as possible. Hay makes as fast, while being loaded on the wagon and in taking it to the barn as it does in the field. A little "sweating" in the mow will do no harm, for a little moisture can safely be left to go off by its own heat, without injuring its feeding qualities.

A GREAT width between and prominence of the eyes indicates a teachable and tractable horse. Width between the ears indicates courage, nobleness, and strength of character. Roundness and elevation between the eyes indicates mildness of disposition, and desire to be caressed and to reciprocate kindness, but never trust one that shows much white above the pupil of the eye, or with white in that organ. What kind of horses to raise and how to raise them are subjects that will bear much agitation and ventilation. There are thousands of farms throughout the country that have no better class of horses upon them than they had fifty years ago. The spirit of improvement has not reached every section as it should and perhaps will. The advantage derived from the profits in raising better horses are not realized by the large majority of even good farmers. When it is fully understood that a $200 or $300 horse can be raised at as little expense and trouble as a cheaper one, the work of improvement will be more general, and the profits of this department of live stock growing will be increased accordingly. But the time for agitating this matter is not only for a few months in the spring of the year when the majority of mares are bred; it should be constantly kept in view by every farmer whom it affects, and there are very few indeed who have not more or less at stake in it.

CORN is the bane of the farm horse, as it is also of the horse doing any other sort of work, not because of not being sufficiently nutritious, but because it makes too much fat and not enough muscle. The horse's muscle wears away by work as metal wears away by friction. Fat wears away under exercise, but in nowise lessens the power for either draft or speed. On the other hand, well nourished and vigorously exercised muscles, without a deposit of fat to keep them company, are much more efficient for any purpose for which the horse is kept than where there is a load of fat to be carried. The trainer acts upon this proposition and works the fat off, experience having shown that the muscles, trained down by exercise until fat accumulations are removed, fattening foods being mainly abstained from, gives the best results in the case of a speedy horse. The same rule will hold good with the work horse, though modified by the degree in which the movements of the latter are slower than those of the former. If the farmer has only corn for feed then he will be wise if he make sale of the corn or the greater part of it, buying oats instead.

KIND TO SERVANTS.

It makes a vast difference in the enjoyment of his life by a laborer whether he is treated with courtesy and reasonable kindness by his employer, or ordered about and belittled and scolded like a barbarian serf; and the intelligent class whose services, as a rule, are the most desirable, either on the farm, in the workshop, or in the kitchen, will choose to pay with better treatment. The man who so treats his help as to deserve their friendship, is far less liable to be left in the lurch at a busy time when lack of help incurs material loss. Of course there are instances of rank ingratitude by hired help; so there are exceptions to all rules. In a general way, hired men and women should be treated like grown-up children—should be commended whenever they deserve it, and should rarely, if ever, be spoken to in angry terms. All directions and corrections should combine kindness with firmness. Fault-finding should not be indulged in—needful corrections in a proper manner being substituted. And all help should be promptly paid.

At Birmingham, Conn., the body of a young woman was disinterred and all the pins in her hair and shroud removed, to quiet her ghost.

AN ANSWER DEMANDED.

Is There a Hidden Cause for Most Suffering? A Careful Investigation.

The inhabitants of Boston and New England have been considerably awakened the past week over some important facts which have come out in articles in the papers as to the real cause of most modern diseases. Every one has known that there has been some mysterious cause for unexplained suffering that even the doctors could not account for. A hidden disease has been shown to be the real cause of most so called pneumonia, convulsions, apoplexy, etc. If this is true, it is of greatest importance that we understand it thoroughly. With this end in view, a representative of this paper has collected facts from various sources which are given herewith.

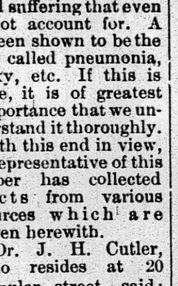
REPORTER AND DOCTOR.

Dr. J. H. Cutler, who resides at 20 Popular street, said: "I have, in common with all physicians, observed the alarming increase of kidney diseases leading to that fearful scourge, Bright's disease, and have been constantly seeking for the proper means of meeting it. I have been prescribing Hunt's Remedy for a great many of my patients with great success. I also administered it to my mother, and with much benefit."

Mr. Samuel Littlefield, 1482 Washington street, said: "I was troubled with kidney disease for years, which finally turned to gravel. I would be free from suffering for a long while, and then have the most terrible pains in my back. I also had inflammation of the worst kind in my bladder, and I was altogether in a fearful condition. I went to several physicians, but all to no purpose, and I found I was growing very feeble. A friend in Malden urged me to use Hunt's Remedy. He had been cured of gravel and liver complaint by its use, and believed it would help me. Well, its effect was wonderful, and I cannot too highly thank my friend for the timely recommendation he made. I wish I could make every one know and understand what a valuable medicine it is."

Mrs. Wm. Gray, 1416 Tremont street, said: "I was troubled with kidney disease for a number of years, at times being so bad from swollen limbs and pains in the back that I was completely under the doctor's care. I received only temporary benefit until I began using Hunt's Remedy, which cured me entirely, and I cannot say too much in its favor."

Captain Joseph L. Hayden, connected with the Walworth Manufacturing Company, residing at 924 East Fourth street, South Boston, spoke in the highest terms of Hunt's Remedy. "Many of my friends in Enfield, Mass., have used it with unusual results, and would not be without it, I employed it in my family when other remedies had proved wholly useless, and it was remarkable in its results. It completely cured my wife of pain in the back."



WELL WITHOUT; DYING WITHIN.

Mr. H. Burney, baggagemaster of the Eastern Railroad, declared that he had used Hunt's Remedy in his family for a long time, and would not be without it. He had not only found it good for kidney complaints (a trouble with which all railroad men are more or less afflicted) but his wife had used it successfully in a severe case of what was, apparently, dyspepsia.

The uniform testimony which was given to the worth of this Remedy in Boston was born out by equally strong statements from residents in the suburbs.

Mr. Joseph G. Bicknell of Cambridgeport asserted that he had been a great sufferer. The fluids he passed were thick with brick dust sediment, and were voided with the greatest pain. Within four days from the time he began using Hunt's Remedy he passed a gravel stone larger than a pea, followed by other smaller ones. A speedy cure was the result, and he cannot recommend the remedy too highly.

Mr. George P. Cox, proprietor of the last factory at Malden, had seen such wonderful effects of Hunt's Remedy among so many of his relatives and friends that he was enthusiastic in its favor. He had not only used it himself with the greatest benefit, but two cousins, William W. and John F. Cox, had experienced untold relief. He would not be without it if it cost $5 a bottle.

Such statements lead us to the inevitable conclusion that, while Bright's disease of the kidneys is the concealed and actual cause of many complaints which bear other names, it can be both met and cured. Let all readers look to their condition at once, and thoroughly convince themselves whether they are or are not in perfect health, and then use that means which has been proven, and is known to be both pure, efficient, and good.

ABOUT PRESERVING EGGS.—Within the last half-dozen years the Prairie Farmer has several times published numerous recipes for preserving or pickling eggs, but still inquiries for the "best method of preserving eggs fresh for winter use" have been coming to me for four or five weeks; therefore, for the benefit of these "new subscribers," and the "old subscribers" who did not heed my "valuable advice," I repeat: The very best method for the housekeeper to preserve a small number of dozens for home use or for market, is to simply pack them on end in salt. Salt enough must be used so that the eggs will not touch each other, or the bottom or sides of the package. The grade of salt used is that known as "coarse fine." Common table salt is, of course, just as good, but it costs a little more. It is not necessary to grease, varnish, or do anything to the eggs (except wash them if they need it), before packing them in the salt; and the package should not be turned. Leaving the cost of the salt out of the question this method is just as good for packing any number of dozens for market. The next best method, and the one that is most used by those who make a business of packing eggs for market is lime and salt pickle. The "Havana method," the "German method," and nearly all the other methods advertised, are recipes for the lime and salt pickle with the addition of a small quantity of other substances, such as alum, saltpetre, borax, baking powder, soda, etc., which add to the trouble and expense, but not to the preservative qualities of the pickle; in fact the simple pickle of salt and lime is better than any of these "new methods" I have tried, and I have tried many. For any way of preserving, the eggs should be fresh, clean and whole.—Fanny Field in Prairie Farmer.

A SPOOL OF THREAD.

What Cotton has to go Through before it is Ready for the Needle.

Few people ever stop to think of the twistings and turnings and the various processes that cotton fibre goes through after it is taken from the pod before it is wound upon a spool and ready for the housewife's needle. The whole story is told, however, in a small space in one of the cases in the hall in the National Museum, given up to an exhibition of textile fabrics. This is one of the many object lessons in the museum, which combined are intended to tell the story of man as he exists on the earth.

First is shown a specimen of cotton in the pod just as it is picked, without having the seeds removed. Next is shown a specimen of the same cotton after it has been ginned and the black seeds have been removed. The Sea Island cotton is used for thread on account of the length of the fibre. A sample of the sacking in which the cotton is baled is also shown. Then the cotton is supposed to have been baled and shipped to the thread factory. Here the first thing that is done with the cotton is to subject it to the "picker" process, by which the cotton from several bales is mixed to secure uniformity. During the picker process much waste, in the form of dust, dirt and short fibres, by the picker. Next the "picked" cotton is wound on a machine, in sheets or laps, into a roll.

The next process illustrated by a practical exhibit is the carding, by which the sheets of cotton are combed or run out into long parallel fibres. The cotton is next seen drawn through a trumpet-shaped opening, which condenses it into a single strand of "silver." Then eight such silvers are run together into one, six of the strands thus produced are drawn into one, and again six of the strands from the last drawing are combined into one. Then comes the slubbing or fast "roving" process, which consists of winding the strand and bobbin. Two strands are twisted and again wound on a bobbin.

After a number of other twistings and windings, during which the strand is gradually reduced in size until it begins to assume a threadlike appearance, two strands of this fine "roving" are run together and twisted, under considerable tension, on a bobbin that makes 7000 revolutions a minute. Two of the cords thus produced are then wound together on a spool, and then twisted from that to another spool. The two-cord thread thus produced is transferred thence to another spool, and then three threads of two cords each are twisted together, forming six-cord thread.

One who has followed the process sees the cotton gradually transformed from a wide band or sheet of loose cotton to a compact thread that will pass through the eye of a needle. The six-cord thread is at last taken from a bobbin and reeled into a skein, in which form it is bleached or dyed. Then it is wound back from the skein upon a big spool, from which it is supplied to little white birch spools, upon which it is wound in regular courses, and is then ready for market. The machine that regulates the last winding measures the number of yards wound on each spool. The spools are made of various sizes, to hold from 200 to 12,000 yards of thread. The labels that decorate the ends of the spools when they are sold are last put on. They are cut and pasted on by machinery with great rapidity.

How Salmon Grow.

The clerk to the Awe Fishery Board vouches for the following:—"In April, 1885, the fishermen employed by Mr. David Baird, tacksman of the Bonaw fishings, landed in their net a kelt, judged to be about 10 lb. in weight. Before returning it to water, one of the men inserted a common pin in the dead fin, twisting it round, so as to form a ring. On Friday, the 21st of May, the same men landed the same fish, with the pin still fixed in it, and it now weighed 22½ lb. The pin, which has been shown to me, bears evidence of having been long in the water, being a good deal corroded and worn away where exposed, but that part of it inserted in the dead fin being uninjured and quite clear. The men are positive it is the same fish, as they recognise the pin from the peculiar way it had been bent. I have just further to state that the fish was to some extent a hybrid of the bull-trout, and not a pure salmon, although this was not observable when first landed as a kelt."

A New Use for the Telephone.

An ingenious Belgian has hit upon a new way of utilizing the telephone. Householders in Liege who sleep too soundly, or whose servants have not acquired the difficult art of early rising, can be supplied with a little bell at the head of their beds, which is in communication with the telephone office. By giving an order at headquarters, the subscriber can be awakened daily, or upon any special occasion, at any hour which he may desire. The bell is not like an alarm, which disturbs the sleeper for a few instants and then allows him placidly to doze off again. It goes on tinkling without cessation until the subscriber intimates to headquarters that he has had quite enough of it.
